Name	Institutional Affiliation(s)	Discipline(s) and Expertise
Regina Aina	University of Papua New Guinea	Coming to UPNG in 2017 to teach in gender studies, Regina previously worked with UNICEF and Eastern Highlands Family Voice conducting research on community sustainable livelihoods. She passed away in 2022
Jackie Cassell	Brighton and Sussex Medical School	Jackie is a clinically qualified consultant in Public Health and in Genitourinary Medicine who has published widely on primary care and the impact of delayed care on disease transmission.
Gabriel Cherake	University of Papua New Guinea	Gabriel is a Teaching Fellow interested in decision-making, environmental ethics, development ethics, Melanesian philosophy and online learning. He is currently studying for a masters degree in Education Technology in Indonesia.
Francesca Dem	New Guinea Binatang Research Center	Francesca is an ecological researcher and entomologist. She is currently deputy director of the New Guinea Binatang Research Center.
Alice Eldridge	University of Sussex	Alice is a co-director of the Sussex Humanities Lab. Her research investigates how listening to ecosystems can give insight into ecosystem status (e.g. biodiversity, ecological status) and how listening to how people listen to ecosystems can give insight into human-environment relations.
James Fairhead	University of Sussex	James is an environmental and medical anthropologist. His book The Captain and 'The Cannibal' (2015) is a narrative history of the 1830 kidnapping of a man from the island of Uneapa in present day PNG and his transport to America.
William Ferea	University of Papua New Guinea	William is a Lecturer in philosophy at UPNG. He specialises in comparative philosophy.
Arthur Hane-Nou	University of Papua New Guinea	Arthur teaches PNG and Pacific History at UPNG. He was coordinator at the Improving Education Program at Central Province Schools and has worked on community development and leadership for Women Make Change Program.

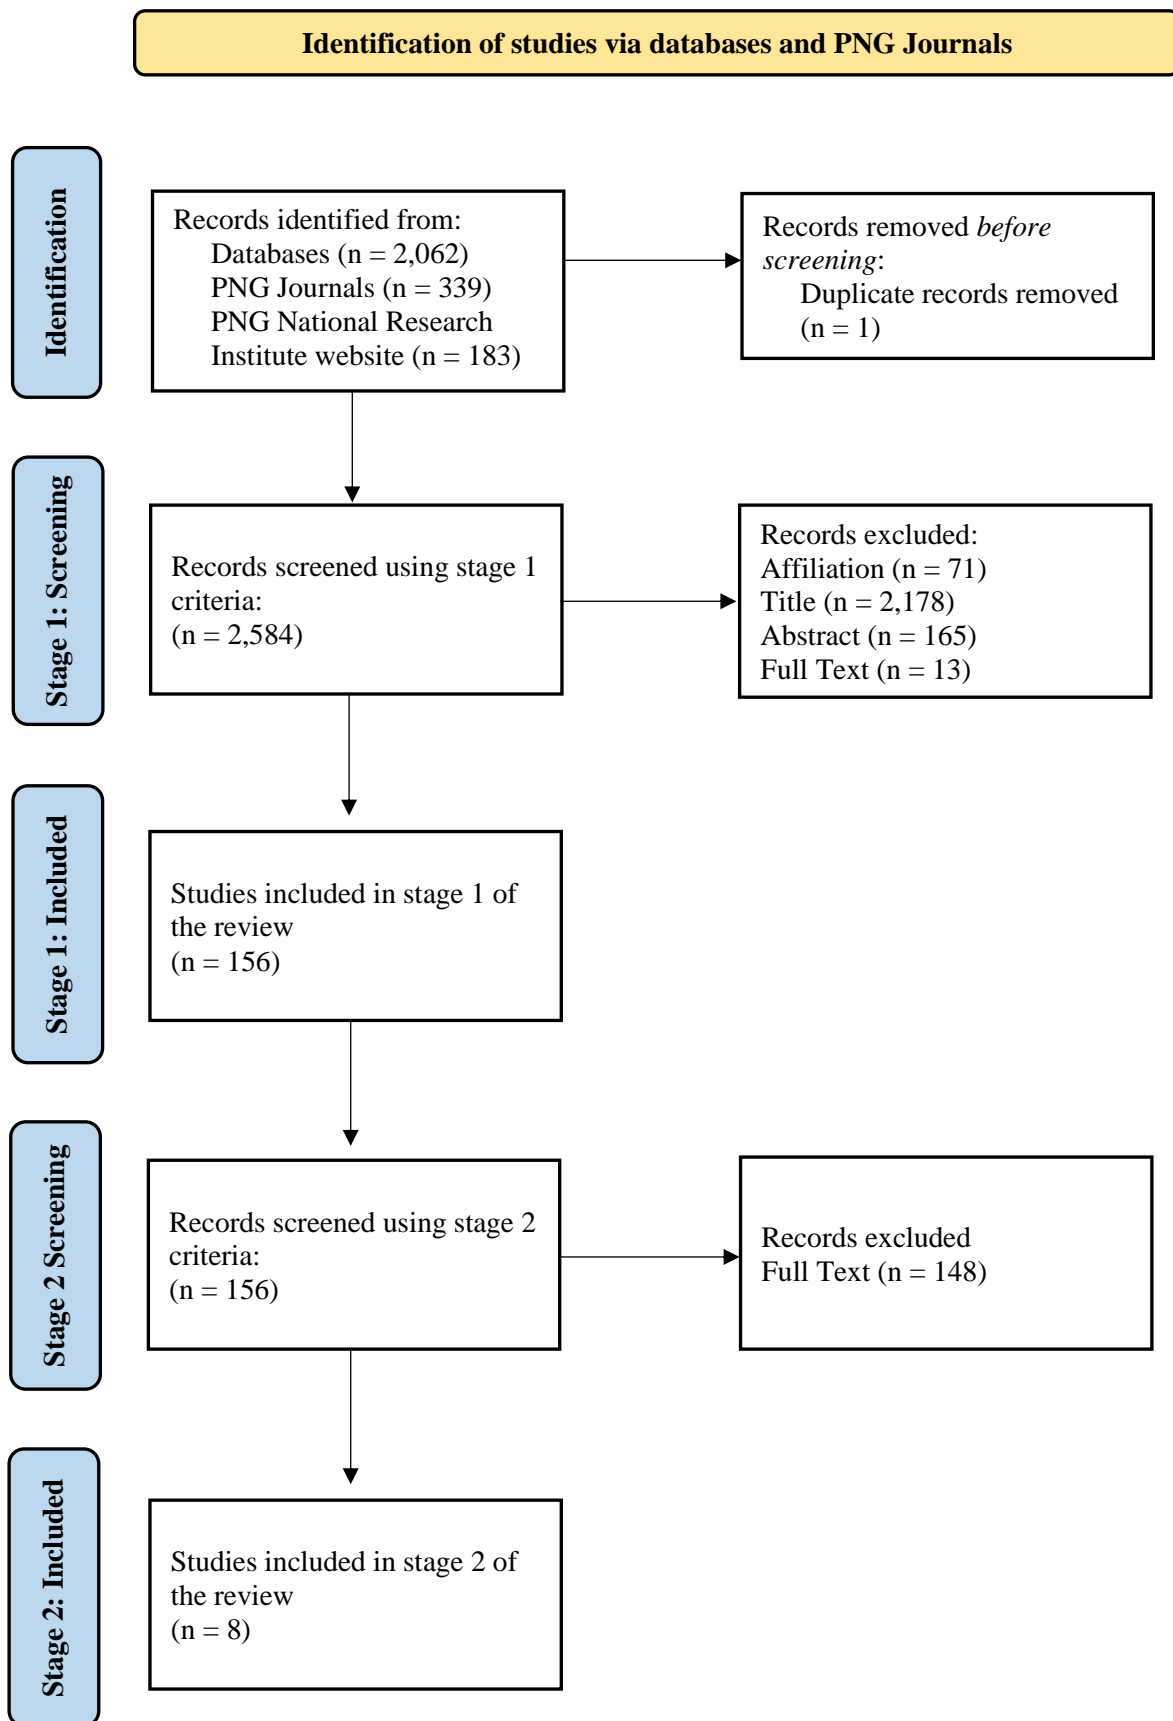

Willy Huanduo	University of Papua New Guinea	Willy teaches civics and ethics, as well as contemporary moral issues at UPNG. He is currently working on research which explores the ontic-epistemic basis of PNG politician and philosopher, Bernard Narakobi's Melanesian Philosophy .
Alfred Kik	University of Goroka; Czech Academy of Sciences; University of South Bohemia	Alfred is a PhD student interested in indigenous language conservation, ethnobiological knowledge, and biodiversity. He is currently working on the languages of PNG.
Jo Middleton	Brighton and Sussex Medical School; University of Sussex	Jo is a Research Fellow in Public Health and Neglected Tropical Diseases with a long-term engagement in biodiversity conservation, particularly around forest preservation and indigenous health in Oceania.
Vojtech Novotny	New Guinea Binatang Research Center; Czech Academy of Sciences; University of South Bohemia	Vojtech is a tropical biologist studying the ecology of rainforests. He is the head of the Biology Centre at the Institute of Entomology, Czech Academy of Sciences, as well as the director of the New Guinea Binatang Research Center.
Ben Ruli	New Guinea Binatang Research Center	Ben is an MPhil student investigating the interlinkages between logging, forest conservation, wellbeing, and livelihoods in PNG, as well as the efficacy of integrating health services into tropical forest conservation projects world-wide.
Alan Stewart	University of Sussex	Alan is an ecologist and entomologist. His research interests are in insect ecology, biodiversity conservation, habitat restoration, and control of insect pests and invasive species.
Jessica Stockdale	Brighton and Sussex Medical School; University of Sussex	Jessica is a philosopher who works across epistemology, moral philosophy and political philosophy in areas related to health and the environment, medical research methodology, and indigenous philosophy.
Jules Winchester	University of Sussex	Jules research interests include language use and identity, intercultural communication, linguistic politeness and the sociopragmatics of humour.
Peter Yearwood	University of Papua New Guinea	Peter is an international historian and leader of the History, Gender Studies, and Philosophy Strand

		at UPNG and Joint Editor of the South Pacific Journal of Philosophy and Culture
